Economy special | June 2013

Whether those in employment expect their pay to increase or decrease over next year... %

Most of those in employment do not think they will receive a pay rise in the next 12 months; this suggests that the trend of wages not growing in line with inflation is set to continue.

Compared to a year ago, do you think the British economy is doing...? %

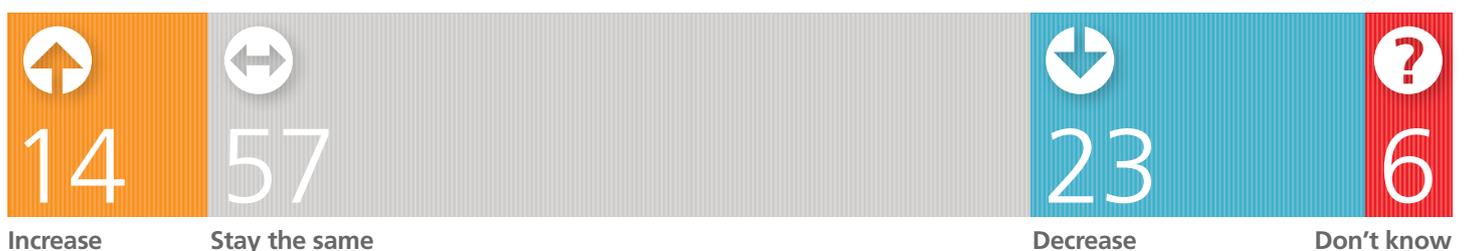

Although only a minority feel that the economy is performing better than a year ago, there are signs of improvement. The proportion that think it has got worse is at its lowest ever level in a TNS BMRB poll and the proportion that think it is performing the same as a year ago has increased.

How would you rate the government's management of the economy over the last 12 months? %

Only a minority of people rate the government's management of the economy over the past year positively.

Whether those not working expect their income to increase or decrease over next year... %

Those not currently in employment are even less positive about the future than those working; almost a quarter think that their income will decrease over the next year.

TNS Omnibus interviewed a representative sample of 1,208 people between 6th June and 10th June 2013. All interviews were conducted as online self-completion. The data is weighted to match population totals for age, sex, social grade, working status, presence of children, 2010 voting patterns and region.
